6:30 p.m. Harriet Hageman: "Private Property Rights and Regulation"

Harriet Hageman, who grew up on a ranch near Ft. Laramie, WY, currently practices law in Cheyenne. She attended Casper College on a Livestock Judging Scholarship from 1981-83. She received her B.S. Degree in Business Administration from UW in 1986. In 1989 she graduated from the UW College of Law.

Harriet has worked on many water and natural resource matters. She and law partner,

Kara Brighton, are actively involved with addressing the impact of federal and state regulations on land and water use. In 2004, in a continuing effort to inform the general public regarding that regulatory environment, Harriet and Kara formed the Wyoming Conservation Alliance. They are working to increase public participation at both the State and Federal regulatory level. They hope to expand the WCA concept into a regional and national resource.

Recently inducted into the Wyoming Ag Hall of Fame, Harriet is defending our way of life! She is out there fighting for farmers and ranchers all the way to the Supreme Court. We know you will enjoy her dynamic discussion!

Amanda Radke: "Taking It To The Streets" An enthusiastic promoter of the beef industry, Amanda will challenge beef producers to speak out about the positives of beef. She believes producers should be able to effectively communicate with consumers and tell their side of the story and refute the misleading information promoted by well-funded animal rights lobbying groups. In her presentation, BEEF magazine blogger and BEEF Daily editor Radke will show producers how to make the most of their efforts to promote the beef industry.

"Ranching Online" You've got your story, and you're ready to tell it. Now, where to start? It all starts with making "Agvocacy" a daily part of your routine. Using social media, Radke will show you how to creatively share stories and positive messages while negating the misinformation about production agriculture along the way. All it takes is a few clicks on the computer, and you're ranching online, connecting with consumers around the globe."
